Arthur Harvey, DMA

This weekend one of the most respected researchers, teachers and authors in the field of sound and music therapy will help students develop an understanding of the distinctiveness among diverse music and sound approaches for therapeutic and healing applications, brain processing and creative content. Through media, readings, discussion, participatory music experiences, group processes, demonstration and lectures, Dr. Harvey will help us gain a thorough understanding of the various uses of sound and music, including their use in accelerating learning.

This is an experiential workshop in which students participate in adaptive and traditional music making with instrumental and vocal processes. Special emphasis will be devoted to stress management approaches with music and sound to accelerate learning. Come prepared to be educated, entertained, enlightened, entrained and enriched.
